Built in 1850, this former corn exchange was originally a single-storey structure. The upper floor was added six years later, reached by a triumphal flight of stairs. It replaced the earlier exchange on this site. Built in 1748, it was known as the 'New Gainsborough' and, itself, had replaced the 'Gainsborough' of 1509. The earliest structure on this site was erected in the mid 15th century to provide shelter for traders in the market place.
